This is a great value apartment rental in Marche. Once an ancient secret passage within this 15th century palace, Apartment Segreto is now a charming studio apartment rental in Marche sleeping up to two guests. The sitting room doubles up as a bedroom with two single beds. There is also a kitchen painted in a cheerful pale yellow, a dining area seating four and a bathroom. Outside, guests enjoy a private internal courtyard.

The palace was originally built as a home for the parish priest of the adjacent church of San Michele Arcangelo however it was subsequently acquired by a local noble family - the Gigliucci - who carried out extensive renovation works. At the beginning of the 17th century, a marriage between this family and the noble Vinci family led to the palace being extended further to reflect the growing needs of this important Italian family. Further work was then carried out on the property in the mid 19th century by well-known architect Giovan Battista Carducci. These days, the palace remains one of the most significant palaces in the region and has been beautifully converted into a series of unique and beautiful apartments including this particular apartment rental in Marche.

This apartment rental in Marche is located in the charming and picturesque hilltop town of Fermo. Due to its elevated position, the town enjoys beautiful sweeping views over the surrounding countryside. Fermo has a rich history, with origins stretching back to Roman times. Today it is still home to a number of significant Roman remains. Off the main tourist trail in Italy, but well worth a visit, it enables holidaymakers to enjoy an extremely authentic stay.
